On Friday, Chinas version of Twitter, Sina Weibo, banned all content containing homosexuality from its platform. But after a week full of online protests, Weibo has reversed its decision, clarifying that its not targeting gay content anymore.

Weibo wrote in a post on Monday, This time, the cleanup of anime and games wont target gay content. It is mainly meant to clean up content related to pornography, violence, and gore. Thank you for your discussions and suggestions, as translated by WatsonWeibo.

As far as Im concerned, gay is not monsters which puzzles the most because many traditional scandals cover the news, the Internet and other social media. Too many people are there in the world so as to various sexual orientations that no right or wrong just choice and preference. They are not supposed to be discriminated against!
